He decided to adjust the cargo deck, which he estimated would take 6 minutes, while the vehicle straddled the live mainline track. The Rountree regional manager said that while his crew was shimming the cargo deck, one of the KUA employees approached, looked at his watch, and said, Only 25 minutes left. In later interviews, the KUA employees deny saying this. The Rountree regional manager said he interpreted the KUA employees statement to mean the time of the next train at the crossing, so he double-timed to his vehicle to call CSXT via his mobile telephone and have the train stopped. He said he did not have a CSXT emergency number and that the CSXT passage application form that he had been given for the trip did not list any telephone numbers. He was trying other CSXT telephone numbers that he knew, including a toll-free number, when he heard a train whistle...
