J By Ernest W. Brown. be detected by litmus and lacmoid, but due mainly at least to the presence of salts or compounds which are either acid to phenolphthaleln, or which exist side by side with such compounds. Lastly, we would emphasize the fact already brought out, that the so-called acidity of the bile, and likewise the so-called alkalinity, have different values in different species of animals, and may likewise vary in the same species under different conditions of diet, etc. The bearing of these facts upon the problem before us is sufficiently manifest. The addition of bile to a neutral pancreatic fluid (neutral to ntmus) must plainly introduce a change in the reaction, as measured by either litmus, lacmoid, or phenolphthaleln. Further, owing to the variations in the acidity and alkalinity, already referred to, it is clear that different samples of bile will produce different results, and when it is remembered how sensitive the proteolytic enzyme trypsin is toward changes of reaction, it is obvious that this feature cannot be overlooked in considering the influence of bile upon pancreatic proteolysis. let us consider now the character of the bile used in some of the preceding experiments on proteolysis. These data show us at once that in introducing say 10 per cent of bile into the digestive mixtures, variations...
