The delusions, small and large fabrications prompted by unrequited love, it s residue of scorn, sorrow, as well as the magic of forgiveness. Product of early twentieth century, WW1, educated by nuns, part-time altar boy who d occasionally nip priest s wine, segued to high school basketball captaincy and subsequent scholarship to St. John s University, fell in love with books, history while running the boards under coach Joe Lapchick, all of it ending when knee refused to make any more quick stops and turns. After a series of nondescript jobs, found self singing with big bands, radio, theaters till the incursion of rock music. Wound up as a headwaiter at Guy Lombardo s Freeport L.I. restaurant. Tired of saying Good evening sir, returned to St. John s, degree, landed English teacher s position at Sayville L.I. high school and spent the next twenty-odd glorious years teaching a rounded English program--composition, poetry, novels, plays to a politically conscious youth, not to exclude, though, those who d nod out after a lunch period of pot.
